WISE MEN

Although Christmas, with its twelve days, is over we still have Epiphany and the visit of the "wise men". We do not know how many of them there were in their visitation, but here in the west we have settled for three because three gifts are mentioned in Matthew's account. Who were they and why are they sometimes referred to as kings? Well, we do best to stick with "wise men" for that is what they were. In the Persia of the time there flourished a group of scholars who studied astronomy, languages, geography and just about any discipline of learning that existed at the time. They were scholars and researchers, and their great learning earned them respect from everybody, including the king. In fact, they were thought of as the king's equal. We know little about them other than that they were acknowledged by the kings of that region as their equal and magus was the term by which they are known. It is an ancient Persian word and is the basis of our word "magic". They were not actual kings, but they were considered to be of royal rank, kingly chaps. The "star" was most likely a comet which can make more than one appearance before it peters out. They appear only in Matthew who knows nothing of the shepherds who only appear in Luke who knows nothing of the magi or the flight into Egypt. So we have the shepherds, again we do not know how many, in Luke and the wise men (magi) in Matthew. In each case we have settled for three of each, based on those three gifts.

The thing that I find encouraging in these stories is this: the magi were of royal rank while the shepherds, farm hands, were the lowest of the low. Thus we have a Saviour in Jesus who applies equally to humans of all ranks and importance, a Saviour of the world.

Would that the modern Persians, the Iranians, could listen to their wisdom once again and act on it. That would be real magic.
